MAJOR LEAGUE NECROLOGY

This part of the necrology section lists all calendar-year 2012 deaths of players, managers, coaches, and umpires who played or worked in the major leagues. The years shown in square brackets after each person's name are the first and last years of known service in professional baseball, even if it was not continuous. A star symbol indicates military service during the deceased's baseball career.

Pages 293-300 list all 2012 deaths in the game, including minor leaguers and Negro Leaguers.

✪Herbert Loren (Herb) Adams [1947–1959] passed away on February 1 in Tulsa at the age of 83. The left-handed outfielder was signed out of college by the White Sox in 1947 and batted .405 with Class D Madisonville. Rapidly ascending Chicago's minor league system, he made his major-league debut in 1948 but couldn't sustain his minor-league success. Batting .261 in 95 games during the next three seasons, Adams held the dubious distinction of making 125 plate appearances before driving in a run, a record that lasted until Nyjer Morgan broke it 62 years later. In 1950 he left baseball to join the US Army for the Korean conflict, where he contracted hepatitis. After a six-month recovery he returned home and resumed his baseball career, never returning back to the major leagues; still, his contract passed through the Indians, Cubs and Cardinals at various times. Adams retired from baseball in 1959 after breaking his leg, leaving the game with a .313 career minor-league batting average. [WHJ]

Darrel Wayne Akerfelds [1983–2012] died in Phoenix on June 24, after a nineteen-month battle with pancreatic cancer, at the age of 50. The Colorado native was drafted by the Atlanta Braves out of Columbine High School in 1980 but instead chose to play college ball for the University of Arkansas and Mesa State College. Selected seventh overall by the Mariners in 1983, the right hander finally debuted with Oakland on Aug.1, 1986. From then until his retirement in 1995, he pitched for the Indians, Rangers, Phillies, Orioles, and Angels, along with a brief stint in Taiwan in 1994. In all, his major league record was 9-10 with a 5.08 ERA, in 125 games over five different seasons. His coaching career began as a Padres minor league pitching coach in 1997. In 2001 Akerfelds was named bullpen coach for San Diego, a position he held even after his diagnosis in 2010. [WHJ]

Rogelio (Hernandez) Alvarez [1956-1973], a Cuban native who played twelve seasons in the Reds organization, passed away in Hialeah, Florida on November 30 at the age of 74. The slugging right-handed first baseman known by his teammates as "Borrego" belted 226 home runs over that time, but appeared in just 17 big league games early in his career. He spent three productive seasons with their Triple A affiliate in Havana and was on the field when gunfire erupted in what would be the final International League game played in that city in 1960. Following his release at age 29, Alvarez played six additional seasons in the Mexican League. [RN]

✪Hubert Carl (Hub) Andrews [1942–1949] died on March 11 in Dodge City, Kansas. He was 89. Andrews spent 1942 in the low minors before joining the Air Force, where he served as an athletic instructor through 1945. He returned to baseball in 1946 and reached the majors the following year. He started the 1948 season with the Giants, but returned to Jersey City after one game and retired following the 1949 season. [TSB]

✪Boyd Owen Bartley [1943–1990], who spent parts of six decades in Dodger Blue as a player, coach, minor league manager and scout, passed away in North Richland Hills, Texas on December 21 at the age of 92. A promising shortstop at the University of Illinois, he was rushed to the majors upon signing with Brooklyn and his cup-of-coffee lasted just nine games before being demoted to Montreal. Shortly thereafter he was deployed to the Pacific in World War II where he injured his shoulder in a Jeep accident and would never fully recover. After convalescing, Branch Rickey assigned Bartley in 1947 to play and manage in the Class D Kansas-Oklahoma-Missouri League where he found success, twice leading Ponca City to the pennant. Following a second stint in the Army, this time as athletic director at Fort Chaffee, Bartley returned to player development and in 1968 became a full-time scout. In 1979, he left a lasting mark on the franchise when he signed a 17th rounder out of Bowling Green named Orel Hershiser. [RN]

Richard Kipp (Rick) Behenna [1978–1985] died of cancer on January 31 in Newnan, Georgia at the age of 51. He won his first three starts as a rookie with the 1983 Atlanta Braves, but never won another major league game and finished his career in 1985 at Cleveland with a lifetime record of 3-10. Behenna was a high school baseball coach after his career ended. [FT]

Dennis John Bennett [1958–1973], a left-handed pitcher who won 43 major league games in the 1960s, died in Klamath Falls, Oregon on March 23 at the age of 72. Born in Oakland and raised in the small northern California town of Yreka, Bennett was named state baseball player of the year in 1957 and after one year in junior college, signed with the Phillies. He reached the majors in 1962, compiling a 9-9 record but was seriously injured in a car crash that offseason while playing winter ball in Puerto Rico. After his rehab, Bennett went 9-5 over the last half of the 1963 season, and his 2.64 season ERA would be his career best. In 1964 he was the team's Opening Day starter and had a 9-5 at the All-Star break but won just three games the rest of the way as his injured left shoulder from the car crash caused increasing trouble, and was traded to Boston for slugging first baseman Dick Stuart. Bennett managed to win five games for the Red Sox in 1965 before surgery caused him to miss the first half of the 1966 season. Though he got off to a 4-1 start for the eventual American League champion Red Sox in 1967, he was not a favorite of first-year manager Dick Williams and was traded to the Mets in June. He struggled in New York in 1968 and was dealt twice, in May to the Cubs and in July to the Angels, but did not return to the majors after that season. He enjoyed four seasons in Hawaii and twice led the PCL in wins before retiring to Oregon. His younger brother Dave appeared in a single game at age 18 as Dennis's teammate on the '64 Phillies. David Wilson (Dave) Boswell [1964–1982] died on June 11 in Joppa, Maryland, at the age of 67. The Baltimore native, and former 20-game winner with Minnesota, participated in two other memorable events during his brief career. He appeared in a 1965 World Series game at the tender age of 20 and, more notoriously, was one of a long list of those who engaged in a fistfight with Billy Martin. Boswell's fight occurred during the 1969 season, on August 6 outside the legendary Lindell AC in Detroit. Boswell had initially suckerpunched teammate Bob Allison, but Martin's attempt to break up the fight further enraged the pitcher and both were bloodied in the melee which garnered national attention. The after-effects of the fight were invisible: Boswell finished the year with a 20-12 mark, a 3.22 ERA, and 190 strikeouts as Minnesota captured the AL West title. It was during the ALCS that year, in the 10th inning of a scoreless game against the Orioles, that Boswell hurt his shoulder while striking out Frank Robinson. The injury effectively ended his career. The next season he managed a 3-7 record with the Twins, and after they released him split the following year with the Detroit Tigers and the Baltimore Orioles before retiring from the mound. He won 68 games before leaving baseball at the age of 26. [WHJ]

✪Fred Langdon Bradley [1940–1981] passed away on April 24 in Pico Rivera, California. He was 91. The native of Parsons, KS, was signed by the New York Yankees in 1940 and spent the next two years in their minor league system, averaging 15 wins per season. In 1943 Bradley enlisted in the U.S. Navy and remained on active duty through the end of World War II. In 1946 he rejoined the Yankees AAA team in Kansas City before being traded, with two others, to the White Sox in exchange for Eddie Lopat. Bradley made his Chicago debut in 1948, making eight relief appearances, and returned to the Windy City for one start in 1949. After spending the rest of 1949 with the Memphis Chickasaws, and with slim prospects for returning to the majors, Bradley retired from baseball. [WHJ]

✪Albert (Al) Brancato [1938–1953], who led the league in errors in 1941, died in Media, PA, on June 14 at the age of 93. Brancato was signed out of high school by Connie Mack for a $1,000 bonus. He played two seasons as the Philadelphia Athletics starting shortstop, leading the league with 61 errors committed in 1941, before entering the military during World War II. He served aboard the USS Boston and played on a military all-star team. After his military discharge he played the balance of the 1945 season for the Athletics before returning to the minors for good. He managed the Elmira Pioneers in 1953 and coached St. Joseph's University from 1959–1964. He was a member of the Philadelphia Athletics Historical Society alumni club and a frequent guest at Society meetings. [TSB]

Eldred William (Bud) Byerly [1940–1962], who was one of the last-living members of the 1944 World Series at the time of his death, passed away in St. Louis on January 26 at the age of 91. Byerly won a World Series ring with the 1944 Cardinals, pitching 1 1/3-hitless innings in Game Three. He claimed to throw a "dry spitter," using it throughout his 11 seasons in the majors. His top season was 1957, leading the Senators in ERA (3.13) and games finished (33). He pitched briefly for the Reds and Red Sox before finishing out his major-league career with the Giants for two years. He spent one last season pitching in the minors at age 40 before managing the 1962 Eugene Emeralds to a last-place finish in the Northwest League. Byerly's death leaves Stan Musial as the only living member of the 1944 World Series champion Cardinals. [TSB]

Paul Jerome [P.J.] Carey [1972-2012], a longtime player development professional for the Phillies, Mariners, Reds, Rockies and Dodgers, passed away on December 7 in San Diego after a long illness. He was 59. The former catcher spent 23 seasons managing rookie league and Class A ball, reaching the big leagues in 1997, serving one year as Don Baylor's bullpen coach in Colorado. Carey joined the Dodgers in 2007 when he was named senior advisor for player development, a post he held until his passing.

Gary Edmund Carter [1972–2010], a Hall of Famer who is the National League's all-time leader in games caught, died on February 16 in West Palm Beach. He was 57. Carter caught just six games as high school player in Fullerton, Calif., but the Expos selected him in the third round of the June 1972 amateur draft with the intent of putting him behind the plate, and Carter turned down a chance to play quarterback at UCLA to sign with Montreal. He rose quickly through the minors, earning a promotion to Class AAA before his 20th birthday and joining the Expos in September 1974. As a major league rookie in 1975 Carter made the All-Star team and was runner-up to John Montefusco for National League Rookie of the Year honors, but he played more games in right field than behind the plate as the Expos had another promising young catcher in Barry Foote, By 1977 Foote was gone and Carter quickly established himself as the successor to Johnny Bench as the NL's top backstop. Carter was an All-Star six straight seasons in Montreal (1979-84), winning three Gold Glove and three Silver Slugger awards and earning Most Valuable Player award votes in five of those seasons, finishing as runner-up to Mike Schmidt in 1980. But after Carter led the NL in RBI in 1984, the Expos traded him to the Mets for four players in what was perceived as a move to reduce the team payroll. He had a career-high 32 home runs for the Mets in 1985, then drove in 105 runs for the '86 Mets and finished third in the MVP voting. He hit two home runs in the Mets' win in Game 4 of the World Series, and his two-out single in the bottom of the tenth inning of Game 6 started the improbable three-run rally that culminated in the ground ball by Mookie Wilson that went between the legs of Red Sox first baseman Bill Buckner, tying the series and putting the Mets in position to win Game 7. Carter stayed with the Mets through 1989, then spent a season each with the Giants and Dodgers before ending his career back in Montreal in 1992. He finished his career with 324 homers (hitting at least 20 in a season nine times) and played in 11 All-Star games, starting seven and earning Most Valuable Player honors in the 1981 and 1984 games. He was elected to the Hall of Fame in 2003 in his sixth year on the ballot. Carter was nicknamed "The Kid" during his first major league spring training and was known for his broad smile and enthusiasm, an enthusiasm that irritated more than a few teammates who considered him self-centered, but those who knew him best knew how deeply he loved baseball. After his playing career Carter was the Florida Marlins' TV analyst during their first four seasons; he later managed in the Mets' minor league system for two seasons followed by three seasons managing in independent minor leagues, but he was unable to realize his goal of managing in the major leagues. Carter spent two seasons as head baseball coach at Palm Beach Atlantic University in West Palm Beach, Fla., before he was diagnosed with the brain tumors that led to his death. His older brother Gordon spent two seasons as an outfielder in the Giants' minor league system. [JGP]

✪Arthur Edward (Art) Ceccarelli [1948–1963] passed away on July 11 in Orange, CT. He was 82. Ceccarelli signed a bonus contract with the Dodgers in 1948, but did not reach the majors until after serving in the military during the Korean Conflict. He was twice taken in the Rule 5 draft and made his major-league debut with the Kansas City Athletics. He had his best season in 1959, throwing two shutouts for the Cubs. He said his biggest thrill in baseball was the ten-inning shutout he pitched for the Cubs against the Dodgers at the Los Angeles Coliseum on September 6, 1959. Following his playing career he served as a pitching coach at Southern Connecticut State University. [TSB]

✪Clifford Day (Cliff) Chambers [1942–1954], who pitched the second no-hitter in Pirates history, died in Eagle, ID, on January 21 at the age of 90. Chambers pitched for the University of Washington in 1941–42, and was inducted into the school's Athletic Hall of Fame in 1984. During World War II he coordinated recreation and rehabilitation programs for returning servicemen at Fort George Wright. After the war, he rejoined the Los Angeles Angels of the Pacific Coast League in 1946. The next season, pitching on one day's rest, he won the one-game playoff for the Angels, beating the San Francisco Seals 5–0 for the PCL championship. He reached the majors in 1948, pitching 29 games for the Cubs as a reliever and spot-starter. He had his greatest major-league success with the Pirates, leading the team in wins in 1949 and 1950. His no-hitter on May 6, 1951, against the Boston Braves was the last game he would win for the Pirates, losing his next four decisions before being traded to the Cardinals. After Chambers' no-hitter, Ralph Kiner claimed that it was the "ugliest" no-hitter he had ever seen: Chambers walked eight, struck out four, gave up two sacrifice hits, and threw one wild pitch in the 3–0 win. It was the only no-hitter Kiner played in, before or after. [TSB]

David Baird (Dave) Cheadle [1970–1978], a first round draft pick (12th overall) in the 1970 amateur draft, passed away February 25 at St. Augustine, Florida at age 60. His major league experience consisted of two innings with the 1973 Atlanta Braves. His motto was "Beeeeee Happy." [FT]

✪Alfred Aloysius (Allie) Clark [1941–1958] died on April 2 in Morgan, New Jersey. He was 88. Mostly a back-up outfielder, the South Amboy, NJ native found himself in the right place at the right time in 1947 and 1948, playing for both the 1947 World Series champion New York Yankees as a rookie before being traded to their successors, the Cleveland Indians, for the 1948 campaign. That year, in 81 games, he batted .310 in support of the Tribe's pennant chase. Originally signed by the Yankees in 1941 and assigned to their minor league system, Clark left baseball between 1943 and 1945 due to military service. In 1951 Cleveland traded him to the Philadelphia Athletics and in 1953 the Chicago White Sox claimed him off waivers but released him a month later. He played in AAA with the Rochester Red Wings until 1957, batting .307 and driving in 340 runs, but never made it back to the majors. After retiring from baseball in 1957, Clark returned to New Jersey and began a second career as an iron worker, and later mentored future World Series managers Jack McKeon and Tom Kelly on their respective paths to the dugout. [WHJ]

Danny Clyburn [1992–2004] was shot and killed on February 7 in Lancaster, South Carolina as a result of a dispute with a neighbor. He was 37. Clyburn played parts of the 1997-98 seasons with Baltimore and made the Opening Day roster with Tampa in 1999. By May 1999 he was back in the minors. For his major league career, Clyburn had 118 plate appearances, batting .211. [FT]

✪Glenn Melvin Cox [1950–1959] died in Los Molinos, CA, on January 8 at the age of 80. Cox pitched parts of four seasons for the Kansas City Athletics. He spent two years in the Army during the Korean Conflict. Cox claimed that Hank Aaron cost him a chance to make the Dodgers roster in 1955, hitting a monstrous spring-training home run after which Cox was sent to the minor league camp. His only career win came in relief against the defending-champion Yankees in 1957. He was the head coach at Los Molinos (CA) High School from 1982–1996. The school's baseball diamond is named in his honor. In 2009 he published an autobiography focusing on his baseball experiences called The Way the Game Was Played. [TSB]

Eugene Leon (Gene) Crumling [1941–1952] passed away in Yorkana, Pennsylvania on February 11 at the age of 89. Despite playing and managing in fourteen minor league seasons, his major league career consisted of only six games for the 1945 Cardinals. The catcher, born and raised in Wrightsville, PA was born Eugene Crumbling, but he dropped the "b" after high school. Crumling signed with St Louis in 1940, and finally made it to the major leagues on September 11, 1945. He managed only one hit in his six-game career, that coming off none other than Phillies' pitcher Jimmie Foxx, who had taken up pitching near the end of his Hall of Fame slugging career, during the thin World War II years. In 1948, at only 26 years old, the Tigers named him manager of the Class B Hagerstown Owls (Interstate League), and in 1951 and 1952 he managed York (Interstate League) and Wellsville (Pennsylvania-Ontario-New York League), respectively. Crumling left baseball after 1952 and worked as a bartender in south-central Pennsylvania for several decades. [WHJ]

✪Charles Edward Allen (Chuck) Diering [1941–1952], named most valuable player on the first Baltimore Orioles team in 1954, died on November 23 in St. Louis. He was 89. A St. Louis native, Diering signed with the Cardinals after graduating from high school and began his professional career in 1941. He missed three seasons (1943-45) serving in the Army during World War II but resumed his baseball career with Rochester of the International League in 1946 and joined the Cardinals in 1947. Known for his speed and defensive ability in the outfield, Diering appeared in 105 games during his rookie season but started only 13 of them and had just 97 plate appearances, with most of his games coming as a pinch-runner or defensive replacement. Diering was back in Rochester in 1948 but returned to the Cardinals in '49 and batted a career-high .263 in 369 at-bats. After two more seasons as a reserve with the Cards he was traded to the Giants for Eddie Stanky and split the 1952 season between New York and Minneapolis of the American Association. He spent all of 1953 with Minneapolis, batting .322, and was selected by the Orioles in the minor league draft after the season. Diering started a career-high 111 games for the 1954 Orioles, and his defensive prowess led him to be named MVP of a team that posted a 54-100 record despite his less-than-imposing offensive statistics (.258, two home runs, 29 RBI). He saw extensive duty for the Orioles again in 1955, with similar results, and ended his major league career in 1956, then spent another year in the minors. Diering owned a car dealership in Alton, Ill., after his playing days and was an active member of the Cardinals' alumni association. His son Chuck played three years in the minors in the 1970s. [JGP]

✪Robert Louis Paul (Bob) DiPietro [1947–1959] passed away on September 3 in Yakima, Washington. He was 85. Nicknamed "The Rigatoni Rifle" due to the strength of his throwing arm, DiPietro appeared in only four games during the Boston Red Sox' 1951 season, batting .091 in thirteen plate appearances. In the field, though, his sole major league assist came in throwing out rookie Yankee outfielder Mickey Mantle at home plate in Yankee Stadium on the final game of the year. DiPietro's minor league career began in 1947, after his discharge from the U.S. Army, but it wasn't until late in the 1951 American League Pennant race that the Red Sox summoned him from AAA Louisville for the final week of the season. After that year he returned to the minors, playing with Birmingham, San Antonio, Louisville, San Francisco, and San Diego before retiring from baseball after the 1959 season. DiPietro settled in Yakima, Washington, where he began a second career in advertising, opening his own firm in 1967. His older son, Bob Jr., was drafted by the Pittsburgh Pirates as a pitcher in 1974, but after injuring his elbow followed his father into the advertising profession. [WHJ]

Donald Lee (Don) Erickson [1951–1962] died in Springfield, IL, on August 1 at the age of 80. Erickson had a nine-game cup of coffee for the Phillies during the 1958 season. In his nine games he struck out nine and walked nine. He earned one save, pitching a scoreless inning of relief for Robin Roberts, shutting down the Dodgers in order with two on and no out to secure Roberts's fifteenth win of the season. In 1959 he pitched for the International League–champion Buffalo Bisons. Two years later, he took the mound for the Southern Association–champion Chattanooga Lookouts, leading the Lookouts in games pitched with 49. A baseball, basketball, and horseshoe-pitching standout, he was inducted into the Springfield (IL) Sports Hall of Fame in 1993. His nephew, Roger Erickson, pitched for the Twins and Yankees. [TSB]

Ryan Paul (Ryan) Freel [1995–2010], tortured by demons hidden from the general public, succumbed to a self-inflicted gunshot wound in Jacksonville on December 22. He was 36. The infielder, a Florida native who used speed and aggressiveness on the base paths to carve out a reputation as something of a "poor man's Johnny Damon", played for Toronto Blue Jays, Cincinnati Reds, Baltimore Orioles, Chicago Cubs, and Kansas City Royals during his eight year major league career. Originally drafted by the St. Louis Cardinals in 1994, Freel instead opted for a year of college before again being drafted in 1995, this time in the tenth round by the Toronto Blue Jays. He worked his way up the baseball ziggurat and debuted with Toronto in 2001. The following year he signed with Tampa Bay as a free agent, and after a solid AAA season in Durham was signed by the Reds in late 2002. Freel played the classic utility role in the field during 2003 before being named opening day centerfielder for Cincinnati in 2004. That year he batted .277 and used his speed to steal 43 bases (fourth highest total in the National League) and hit 8 triples (fifth in the league). The following year he stole 36 more bases despite spending two months on the disabled list, and swiped 37 in 2006. After injury-prone seasons in 2007 and 2008 he was traded to Baltimore as part of the deal that brought Ramon Hernandez to the Orioles, and he hung on for two more years in Chicago, Kansas City and Texas before his final professional season with the independent Somerset Patriots in 2010. [WHJ]

✪Myron Nathan (Joe) Ginsberg [1944–1962], a catcher who played for six of the original eight American League teams, passed away in West Bloomfield, Michigan, on November 2 at the age of 86. Ginsberg served in the Philippines during World War II, playing on military all-star teams despite having little professional experience. After his military discharge he spent two seasons in the low minors before jumping to the Tigers. During his 13-season major-league career he only appeared in 100 games twice, 1950 and 1951, leading the league in most stolen bases allowed during 1951 and catching the first of Virgil Trucks's two no-hitters in 1952. In 1961 he tied a record by allowing three passed balls in an inning while catching Hoyt Wilhelm. During spring training that year he had been tasked with the equally daunting task of catching flamethrower Steve Dalkowski. He played two games for the 1962 Mets, after which he finished the season in the minors and retired. Because he was the starting catcher in the first Mets home game in 1962, his name was included in the How to Score section of Mets game programs for many years. [TSB]

Robert Houston (Bob) Hale [1952–1968] died on September 8 in Park Ridge, Illinois. He was 78. The left handed first baseman was signed by the St. Louis Browns before the 1952 season, and he proved his mettle in hitting .332 and driving in 100 runs with Class A Aberdeen (Northern League) in 1953. In 1955, on July 4, Hale debuted with the transplanted Browns, now the Baltimore Orioles, and went on to finish the season with a .357 batting average in 182 at-bats over 67 games. He spent parts of each of the next four seasons shuttling between Baltimore and the minors as a first-baseman and pinch hitter before the Orioles waived him in 1960. Cleveland claimed him off waivers and, in 1961, sold him to the New York Yankees. It was with the Yankees that year that Hale earned his World Championship ring, even though he did not appear in the series. He played 1962 in the minors, and then left baseball for a career in education, ultimately serving as an elementary school principal in Illinois. [WHJ]

Boyd Gail Harris, Jr. [1950–1961], the last New York Giants player to hit a home run, passed away on November 14 in Gainesville, Virginia. He was 81. In 1958 he led the American League in games played as a first baseman, and also led the league in errors committed. Despite his poor defense, he led the Tigers with eight triples and 20 home runs and finished second to Al Kaline with 83 RBI that year. His defensive play rebounded in 1959, finishing second to Vic Power for highest fielding percentage by a first baseman. [TSB]

✪William Troy Herriage [1951–1958], known as "Dutch," died in Atlanta on January 21 at the age of 81. As a prep pitcher Herriage led Oakdale (CA) High School to three-consecutive league championships. He was not as successful in the majors, where he went 1-13 in his lone major-league season for the woeful 1956 Kansas City Athletics, finishing with the highest ERA (6.64) on the staff among qualifiers. Herriage spent the next two seasons playing for similarly woeful teams in the minors before retiring. [TSB]

Norman Michael (Mike) Hershberger [1959–1971], who led the American league in outfield assists in 1965 and 1967, passed away in Massillon, Ohio, on July 1 at the age of 72. Hershberger was known as a talented defensive outfielder, leading the American League in outfield assists in 1965 (14) and 1967 (17). He signed a free agent contract with the White Sox after attending the University of Cincinnati on a football scholarship. Though generally was not known as a great hitter, he had a decent batting eye, finishing in the top ten for most at-bats per strikeout four times. On June, 26, 1964, he broke up Twins pitcher Gerry Arrigo's no-hit bid with a ninth-inning leadoff single. He played for both the Kansas City and Oakland Athletics, and was acquired by the Brewers in the franchise's first trade, along with Lew Krausse, Phil Roof and Ken Sanders. [TSB]

Kevin John Hickey [1978-2012], known as "baseball's ultimate longshot", died on May 16 in his beloved Chicago. He was just 56. The left-hander compiled a 9-14 mark with 17 saves and 3.91 ERA over 231 relief appearances in six big league seasons with White Sox and Orioles. A Southside native from the Brighton Park neighborhood, Hickey led his team, the Bobcats, to the 1976 16-inch softball world championship and made the most of an open tryout at Comiskey Park, impressing scouts and winning a roster spot. Following a colorful career that would take him Mexico and Taiwan, he rejoined the White Sox organization in 2004 as a pre-game instructor, batting practice pitcher and optimistic clubhouse presence. After collapsing prior to the team's morning workout on Opening Day in Dallas, Hickey was rushed to Parkland Hospital and never regained consciousness. [RN]

✪Lloyd Eldon Hittle, Sr. [1946–1954], known as "Red," passed away on March 3 in Lodi, California. He was 88. Hittle served in the Pacific during World War II, and upon his return signed with the Stockton Ports. He won 20 games for the Ports in 1947, leading the team to the California League championship before moving up to the Class B Bremerton Bluejackets. In 1948 he won 18 games for the Bluejackets, leading the Western International League in strikeouts and ERA. He played parts of the 1949 and 1950 seasons for the Senators, compiling a 7-11 record, with five of the wins and his two career shutouts coming against the White Sox. After his professional career ended, he continued playing semipro ball for the Lodi (CA) Guild Wine club. [TSB]

Stanley Lucius (Stan) Johnson [1957–1972] died in San Francisco on April 17 at the age of 75. The first African-American recipient of a baseball scholarship at the University of San Francisco, Johnson was signed by the Chicago White Sox in 1957 and was quickly identified as one of the top outfield prospects in the entire organization. He was stalled at AAA, though, by an established White Sox outfield of Minnie Minoso, Jim Landis and Floyd Robinson, a trio that played well enough to propel the "Go-Go Sox" into the 1959 World Series. Johnson made his American League debut the following September, coming to bat six times that month and collecting his sole major league hit, a home run off Frank Funk of the Cleveland Indians. The following summer Johnson was traded, along with Bob Shaw, to Kansas City as part of an eight-player deal. He appeared in three games for the Athletics that summer before returning to the minor leagues. After seven more years in the Pacific Coast and International Leagues, Johnson spent a season in Japan, with the Taiyo Whales, before finally retiring from the game in 1969. [WHJ]

✪Harold Kefauver (Hal) Keller [1948–1999] passed away from esophageal cancer in Sequim, Washington on June 5 at the age of 84. While his major league catching career with the Washington Senators amounted to only 25 games spread over three seasons, and while his older brother Charlie enjoyed far greater success on the diamond, Hal is widely acknowledged as the first major league executive to introduce the RADAR gun to the scouting toolbox, and as a senior executive for the Senators, the Texas Rangers, and the Seattle Mariners he oversaw the scouting and drafting of players like Dave Righetti, Roy Smalley, Len Barker and Mark Langston. Keller served in the U.S. Army during World War II, and joined the Senators in 1947. In 1949 he had a three-game cup of coffee with Washington, getting a hit in his first major league at-bat, but his baseball career never really launched. By 1952, and out of options, he was sold to AAA Toronto, and he continued in the minors until back trouble forced his retirement in 1955. Keller returned to the University of Maryland to complete his degree in Economics, he eased back into organized baseball, this time in the Senators' front office. When the Senators became the Texas Rangers, Keller moved with the team and, on the suggestion of Danny Lithwiler, introduced RADAR as a method for evaluating pitch speed. Keller's final executive position was General Manager of the Seattle Mariners in 1984 and 1985. [WHJ]

Charles Gilbert (Chick) King [1951–1961], the last major leaguer called "Chick," died on July 9 in Paris, Tennessee. He was 81. A high school All-American football player, King signed with the Tigers after starring for Memphis State College (now Memphis State University) in 1950. He was stuck in the minors until Al Kaline and Harvey Kuenn both went down with injuries in 1954. Then, for the last week of August, he became the regular center fielder, after which he was relegated to pinch-hit duty through the end of the season. He spent the next three seasons in the minors, with only brief call-ups in 1955 and 1956. He was traded to the Cubs before the 1958 season, but could not break into the outfield. His major-league career ended after five games with the Cardinals. King found success against Sandy Koufax, reaching base four times (three walks) in eight chances facing Koufax, while never striking out. He is one of only seven batters to face Koufax eight or more times without striking out. After his retirement from baseball he coached American Legion baseball in Paris. He was an inaugural inductee into the Paris-Henry County Sports Hall of Fame. [TSB]

✪Howard Dean (Howie) Koplitz [1956–1966], the 1961 Southern League MVP and Minor League Player of the Year, passed away on January 12 in Oshkosh, Wisconsin. He was 73. Koplitz pitched a combined no-hitter in the 1954 Wisconsin state high school tournament, leading his team to the championship. In 1961 he went 23-3 with a no-hitter for the Birmingham

Barons before being called up to the Red Sox. He started his major-league career on a high note, striking out the first batter he faced, Hall of Famer Carl Yastrzemski. Unfortunately, he injured his arm pitching in cold weather during spring training the next year and could not replicate his minor-league success. He compiled a 9-7 record in parts of five seasons for the Tigers and Senators. After his retirement from baseball he was the director of the Oshkosh, WI, American Legion Baseball Organization. [TSB]

John Francis (Jack) Kralick [1955–1967] died in San Blas, Mexico on September 18 at the age of 77. He pitched for the Washington Senators, the Minnesota Twins, and the Cleveland Indians between 1959 and 1967, was selected to the 1964 American League All-Star team, and threw the first no-hitter in Minnesota Twins' history. An Ohio native, the left-handed Kralick grew up in Michigan and attended Michigan State University for a year before signing with the Chicago White Sox in 1955. It wasn't until the Senators acquired him in 1958, though, that he found a path to the major leagues. His 1962 no-hitter, still regarded as one of the finest pitching performances in Senators/Twins history, was nearly perfect, with a one-out walk in the ninth inning the only blemish on his dominant performance. He was traded to the Indians, in exchange for Jim Perry, the following May, and made the All Star team in 1964 although he did not appear in the game. Sold to the Mets on May 1, 1967, Kralick was involved in a single-vehicle car accident that night, effectively ending his professional baseball career. He retired with a career record of 67-65, and after a few years working odd jobs and selling insurance, he moved to Alaska. An avid outdoorsman, he divided his time between Alaska and South Dakota before finally settling down in the fishing village of San Blas in the mid-1980s. [WHJ]

James Louis (Jim) Kremmel [1971–1976], 0-4 in his major league career, passed away October 12 at age 63 in Spokane, Washington. He was 0-2 in 1973 with Texas and had the same record the following season with the Chicago Cubs. Kremmel was the first major league player to graduate from the University of New Mexico. He had a lifelong passion for psychological and spiritual growth, and for yoga. After his baseball career, he earned a Masters Degree from Gonzaga University in Counseling Psychology. From 1998-2002, Jim was a Sports Psychology Consultant for the Dodgers, Royals and Texas Rangers. He was a private practice psychotherapist for most of the last 25 years he lived. [FT]

Donald Lee (Don) Leshnock [1968–1975], whose major league career consisted of facing five batters, died May 5 in Raleigh, North Carolina at 65. His one appearance was with Billy Martin's 1972 Detroit Tigers. After baseball, Leshnock worked in the insurance and public pension businesses. His son Donnie was a catcher in the New York Yankees organization. There is a chapter about the late Mr. Leshnock's career in "Once Around the Bases" by Richard Tellis. [FT]

✪Gerald Thomas (Jerry) Lynch [1950–1966], one of baseball's premier pinch-hitters, passed away on April 1 in Austell, GA, at the age of 81. Lynch was known as a weak fielder, but at the time of his retirement, he held the record with 18 pinch-hit home runs and only Smoky Burgess (137 in 1966; career, 145) had more than Lynch's 116 career pinch-hits; Lynch currently sits at number ten on the all-time pinch-hits list. After starting his professional career in 1950 he missed the next two seasons while serving in the military during the Korean Conflict. Upon his return he played one season for the Norfolk Tars, then made the jump to the majors as a corner outfielder for the Pirates. He was drafted by the Reds in the 1956 Rule 5 draft and became a star pinch-hitter, leading the National League in pinch-hits in 1960 and 1961. In 1961 he tied Joe Cronin's record with 25 pinch-hit RBIs. After his retirement from baseball, he managed golf courses in the Atlanta area with former teammate Dick Groat. He was inducted into the Cincinnati Reds Hall of Fame in 1988. [TSB]

✪Leland Stanford (Lee) MacPhail, Jr. [1945-1990], a longtime baseball executive who spent ten years as American League president, died in Delray Beach, Florida on November 8 at the age of 95. MacPhail is part of the only father-son combo in the Hall of Fame. His father Leland Sr., known as Larry, was the innovative president of the Reds, Dodgers and Yankees in the '30s and '40s. And Lee's son Andy was the general manager of the Twins' two World Series champions (1987 and 1991) before going on to be the top baseball executive of the Cubs and Orioles. After graduating from Swarthmore College with a history degree in 1939, Lee MacPhail was discouraged by his father from pursuing a career in baseball, so he went to work for a livestock company in South Carolina to begin a business career. But he realized baseball was where he wanted to be, so his father (then the president of the Dodgers) hired him as business manager for the Dodgers' Reading farm club in the Inter-State League in 1941. Lee moved to Toronto to become general manager of their International League club in 1942. After that season, with America at war, MacPhail enlisted in a special naval training program but failed the physical. He taught at a prep school in Massachusetts until he finally passed his physical and entered the Navy as a ship supply officer in May 1945. When he was discharged (as a lieutenant junior grade) in 1946, MacPhail went to work for his father again; by this time Larry was president of the Yankees, and Lee became general manager of their Kansas City farm club. Larry MacPhail resigned from the Yankees in an acrimonious parting after the 1947 season, but Lee kept his job in Kansas City and moved to New York as the Yankees' co-farm director after the 1948 season. He was promoted to vice president and director of player personnel after the 1954 season. From there MacPhail became general manager and later president of the Orioles (1958-65), worked in the office of commissioner William Eckert (1966, for which he earned Major League Executive of the Year honors from The Sporting News) and returned to the Yankees as general manager (1966-73) before succeeding Joe Cronin as president of the American League at the beginning of 1974. As league president MacPhail played a major role in settling the players' strike of 1981. But he was perhaps best remembered for his decision in what came to be known as "The Pine Tar Game" on July 24, 1983. A go-ahead home run by Kansas City's George Brett at Yankee Stadium was disallowed by umpire Tim McClelland, who ruled Brett had broken a rule by having too much pine tar on his bat. Kansas City protested, and MacPhail overruled McClelland, allowing the home run to stand; the game was later resumed from that point and the Royals won. MacPhail intended to retire at the end of 1983, despite being solicited to succeed Bowie Kuhn as commissioner, but he took the role as the owners' chief negotiator in labor matters as head of the Player Relations Committee before finally going into retirement at the end of 1985. Known for his calm demeanor and cooperative manner, MacPhail was one of the most widely respected men in the game. He was elected to the Hall of Fame by the Veterans Committee in 1998. When MacPhail retired, Washington Post writer Tom Boswell noted MacPhail had visited at least two art museums in every major league city, had attended a symphony orchestra performance in every major league city, and had read at least one biography of every U.S. president. Terry Alan Mathews [1987–2000] died in Alexandria, Louisiana of a heart attack on February 24 at age 47. Mathews pitched for Texas, Florida, Baltimore and Kansas City for parts of eight seasons from 1991-99, compiling a record of 22-21. Some remember a mammoth home run he gave up to Jose Conseco at old Arlington Stadium on April 18, 1992. In 1995 he became one of the few relief pitchers to have three hits in a game. [FT]

Marvin Julian Miller [1966-1983] passed away in Manhattan on November 27 at the age of 95. As executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association (MLBPA), he was, quite simply, one of the most influential figures in the history of the game. We acknowledge his monumental contributions in the 2012 Year in Review essay, in the section titled Farewell & Amen on page 81.

Donald Ray (Don) Mincher [1956–2011], a two-time All-Star who went on to become president of the Southern League, died on March 4 in Huntsville, Alabama. He was 73. Mincher was born and raised in Huntsville and signed with the White Sox after graduating from high school. The Sox traded him, along with future All-Star catcher Earl Battey, to the Washington Senators for slugger Roy Sievers just before the 1960 season began, and Mincher was the Nats' first baseman and cleanup hitter on Opening Day, but after some early season struggles he was sent to the minors in mid-May. The 1961 season went similarly for Mincher—he started the year in the big leagues with the team that had relocated to Minnesota, then was sent to the minors at the end of May—but in 1962 Mincher was in the big leagues to stay. A powerful lefthanded hitter, he hit 22 home runs for the 1965 American League champions, plus a homer off Don Drysdale in Game 1 of the 1965 World Series. After slumping to 14 homers in 1966, Mincher was traded to the Angels and rebounded to 25 homers in 1967, being named to the All-Star team for the first time. But he struggled in 1968 after he was hit in the jaw by a Sam McDowell fastball early in the season and suffered occasional headaches and dizzy spells afterward. Left unprotected in the American League expansion draft after the season, he was selected by the Seattle Pilots and bounced back to hit 25 home runs with a career-best 78 RBI. He was the team's only representative in the All-Star Game, and as the team moved to Milwaukee the following spring, he remains the only Seattle Pilots all-star ever. Mincher was traded to Oakland in 1970 and hit 27 homers for the A's. He was traded to Washington in 1971 and moved with the team to Texas in 1972 before being dealt back to the A's that July. In his final major league at-bat in the 1972 World Series he stroked a game-tying pinch-single in the bottom of the ninth of Game 4, a game Oakland would go on to win en route to their first of three successive world championships. Mincher finished his major league career with 200 home runs. He returned to Huntsville after retiring as a player and managed a sporting goods store before becoming general manager of the Southern League's Huntsville Stars in 1984, then put together a group that bought the team in 1994. A two-time league executive of the year, Mincher was named interim Southern League president in 2000 and was given the job on a permanent basis the next year when he sold his interest in the Stars. He continued as league president until he retired after the 2011 season. A beloved figure in minor league baseball, he was given the minors' highest honor, "King of Baseball," in 2010. He was also named to the Alabama Sports Hall of Fame in 2008. [JGP]

✪Leslie Clyde (Les) Mueller [1937–1948] died in Belleville, Illinois on October 25 at the age of 93. The right handed pitcher is perhaps best remembered for his single-game record of pitching 19 2/3 innings against the Philadelphia Athletics on July 21, 1945, a game that finally ended in a 1-1 draw after 24 innings, and which remains the longest tie game ever played in the AL. He first signed with the Detroit Tigers in 1937, and after four years in the minors made his major league debut in August 1941. After being returned to the minors following spring training in 1942, Mueller joined the Army and served for three years during World War II. He returned to the Tigers in 1945 and joined the rotation when Al Benton broke his ankle. Les posted a 6-8 mark in 18 starts and 26 appearances that year, and tossed two innings of mop-up relief against the Cubs in Game 1 of the World Series, but when the rest of the regular major leaguers returned from war service, was sent to AAA. Mueller played through the 1948 season but retired to Belleville in 1949 and took over his family's furniture business. [WHJ]

Robert Howard (Bob) Myrick [1974-2008] passed away in Hattiesburg, Mississippi on August 23 at the age of 59. A left-handed relief pitcher, the great-nephew of Senators and Red Sox star Buddy Myer was originally drafted by Baltimore in 1970, just after high school. Opting for college and drafted again, this time out of Mississippi State University, by the New York Mets in the 20th round of the 1974 draft. Two years later, in 1976, he debuted against the Cardinals, making a single pitch to Hector Cruz that induced a groundball out. Bob spent three seasons with the Mets, 1976-1978, appearing in 82 games, and he compiled a 3-6 record with a 3.48 ERA in the span. Chronic tendonitis in his throwing shoulder kept him in the minors until the Mets traded him, along with Mike Bruhert, to the Texas Rangers in exchange for Dock Ellis in 1979. Myrick's shoulder never fully healed, though, and he retired from the diamond in 1981. After baseball he returned to Mississippi and took over his family's business, running the building supply firm until a few months before his death. [WHJ]

Raymond Edmond [Ray] Narleski [1948–1959], who led the 1954 American League champion Cleveland Indians in saves as a rookie, died on March 29 in Clementon, New Jersey. He was 83. Narleski was part of a three-generation baseball family. His father, Bill, was an infielder for the Red Sox in 1929-30; his brothers, Bill and Ted, played in the minors, as did his son Steve and his nephew, William. Ray Narleski signed with the Indians after graduating from high school and spent 1948 in the Eastern League, but he sat out the entire 1949 season in a contract holdout and played semipro baseball in his native New Jersey. He returned to the Cleveland organization in 1950. Narleski was converted to relief pitching in Indianapolis in 1953 by manager Birdie Tebbetts, with the encouragement of Cleveland skipper Al Lopez. Lopez kept two rookies in his bullpen in 1954, and both played key roles as the Indians set an American League record with 111 wins; the righty Narleski saved 13 games (third in the American League) with a 2.22 ERA, while lefty Don Mossi had a 1.94 ERA with seven saves. In 1955 Narleski led the AL in games (60) and saves (19) and finished sixth in the Most Valuable Player Award voting. The next year he was named to the All-Star team, with a 1.62 ERA at the break, but was unable to play in the game because of elbow problems that kept him out of action for nearly two months. In 1957 Narleski had 12 saves with a 2.91 ERA through the end of June when Indians manager Kerby Farrell began using him as a starter; he went 6-4 with a 3.30 ERA in 15 starts while still finishing second in the league with 16 saves. Then in 1958 Narleski had 10 wins (nine as a starter) in the first half of the season to earn a spot on the All-Star team, and he pitched 3-1/3 scoreless innings in the All-Star Game. But after he lost four of his first five starts in the second half manger Joe Gordon moved him back to the bullpen. Narleski was traded to Detroit after the season and was never again an effective major league pitcher. After going 4-12 in 1959 he had back surgery and missed the entire 1960 season, then made a comeback attempt in 1961 but left the team in spring training when the Tigers wouldn't commit to keeping him on the major league roster. Narleski did not play professional baseball after that but continued to play semipro ball for several years while working in an auto body shop. [JGP]

Howard Ralph (Howie) Nunn [1954–1963] passed away on February 17 in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. He was 76. Nunn pitched parts of three seasons in the majors, spending the full 1961 season on the Reds roster despite being sidelined for more than a month with a sore arm. He was purchased by the Mets as the team rounded out its inaugural roster, but was returned to the Reds during spring training. He pitched just six more games for the Reds, and after the 1963 season retired with a 112-58 minor-league record and a 4-3 major-league record. Roommates with Jim Brosnan on both the Cardinals and Reds, Nunn is featured in Brosnan's seminal books, The Long Season and The Pennant Race. [TSB]

✪James Thomas (Jim) Obradovich [1967–1982], a slugging first baseman who appeared in ten games after earning a September 1978 call-up with the Houston Astros, died March 3 in Lancaster, Kentucky at age 62. His one big hit was a run-scoring triple off of Gaylord Perry. Obradovich played his final three seasons in the Mexican League. [FT]

George Dana O'Donnell [1949–1961] died in Springfield, IL, on December 19 at the age of 83. After a standout high-school baseball career, O'Donnell's father sent him to a training camp in 1948 where he signed with the Browns, starting his career with the 1949 Olean Oilers. He led the 1951 Big State League with 22 wins for the Waco Pirates, and led the 1953 Pacific Coast League champion Hollywood Stars with 20 wins, earning PCL Rookie of the Year honors. His major-league career consisted of 21 games for the 1954 Pirates, in which he compiled a 3-9 record with two saves. After a brief major-league stint, he returned to the minors for seven seasons in the PCL and International League. [TSB]

John Francis O'Neil [1939-1986], the oldest inductee to be placed in the Chautauqua Sports Hall of Fame in February 2012, passed away six weeks later in Jamestown, New York on April 18 at the age of 91. A journeyman shortstop known by his teammates as "Scooter", the Kentucky native hit .266 in 46 games for the 1946 Phillies. Following his playing days, O'Neil became a successful minor league general manager in Valdosta, Birmingham and Jamestown in the Tigers chain before embarking on a 25-year scouting career for the Braves and Dodgers, with his most notable signee being Mike Scioscia. [RN]

Harry William Parker [1965-1976] died on May 29 in Richmond, Virginia. He was 64. The pitcher posted a career 15-21 record over parts of six major league seasons with the Cardinals, Mets and Indians. Drafted in the fourth round of the inaugural major league draft in 1965 after an outstanding scholastic athletic career in which he starred in both basketball and baseball, Parker finally reached the big leagues in 1970, after missing the 1969 season due to military service. In 1971 he was part of an eight-player deal between the Cardinals and the Mets that, ultimately, cleared the way for his most productive years on the mound. In 1973 Parker posted an 8-4 record, with a 3.35 ERA, in 131 innings for the eventual National League Champion Mets. In the post season he had a 2.08 ERA in four games, and did not give up a single run in three World Series appearances against the Oakland Athletics. Taken off the waiver wire by St. Louis in 1975, he was traded to Cleveland a year later in a straight-up exchange for Roric Harrison. Parker left baseball after 1976 and enrolled at the University of Tulsa to study mathematics. He lived the remainder of his life as a very private man, with little known about his activities after baseball. [WHJ]

✪Melvin Lloyd (Mel) Parnell [1941–1969], the Boston Red Sox' all-time winningest lefthanded pitcher, passed away on March 20 in New Orleans. He was 89. The New Orleans native was primarily a first baseman in high school but signed with the Red Sox as a pitcher after scout Ed Montague saw him strike out 17 batters in an emergency pitching assignment. He began his professional career in 1941 and spent three years (1943-45) in the Army Air Force during World War II. Parnell went north with the Red Sox in 1947 and struggled, putting up a 6.39 before being farmed out to Louisville, then he missed most of the rest of the season with a broken finger after trying to stop a line drive with his bare pitching hand. Given a second chance in the majors in 1948, Parnell responded with a 15-8 record. The next season, 1949, was Parnell's finest, as he led the league with 25 wins, a figure no Red Sox pitcher has equaled since. His 2.77 ERA was second-lowest in the American League and he completed 27 of his 33 starts. The season ended in disappointment, though. In the next-to-last game of the season at Yankee Stadium, with the Red Sox in position to clinch the pennant with a victory, Parnell was staked to a 4-0 lead but was knocked out in the fifth inning as the Yankees rallied to win. Another Yankee victory the next day gave the New Yorkers the pennant, as Parnell gave up a home run and a single in relief. Parnell remained one of the league's top hurlers over the next four seasons, winning 18 games in both 1950 and 1951 followed by a 21-win season in 1953 in which he shut out the pennant-winning Yankees four times. He appeared in the All-Star Game in both 1949 and 1951. Parnell missed nearly two months of the 1954 season with a broken arm after he was hit by a pitch as a batter, and elbow trouble prevented him from pitching a full season after that. But in his final season he threw a no-hitter against the White Sox on July 14, 1956, at Fenway Park. Parnell finished his career with 123 wins, at the time second to Cy Young in Red Sox history. Since then his total has been surpassed only by Roger Clemens and Tim Wakefield. After retiring as a player Parnell was head coach at Tulane in his home city in 1958, then managed the New Orleans Pelicans of the Southern Association in 1959. He spent three years as a minor league manager for the Red Sox from 1961-63 and worked as a broadcaster for the Red Sox (1965-68) and White Sox (1969) before going home to New Orleans for good. In his later years he owned a pest control business. [JGP]

Pascual Gross Perez [1976-1996] died in San Gregorio de Nigua, Dominican Republic on November 1 at the age of 55, the victim of a home invasion and homicide. The former All-Star pitched for eleven seasons for the Pirates, Braves, Expos and Yankees before closing out two-decade professional career in Taiwan. Recommended by scout Neftali "Pablo" Cruz and signed by Howie Haak for the Pirates in 1976, his tumultuous career plumbed depths that included an arrest, several suspensions, and subsequent rehabilitation attempts, for cocaine use, as well as lofty heights like his All-Star 1983 season in which he posted a 15-8 record and 3.43 ERA for the Atlanta Braves. He notched a 14-8 mark the following year, and left major league baseball in 1991 with a career 67-68 record. Perez hailed from a baseball family (two of his brothers, Melido and Carlos, also played in the majors, and three others played in the minors), so although he looked almost frail at 6'2" and less than 165 lbs., he was virtually fearless when it came to mixing it up with the opposition. One of his more colorful moves –irritating to an opponent - was to shoot an imaginary 'finger gun' after an out, and instead of walking from mound to dugout after an inning, Perez would often sprint. He pitched a 5-inning no-hitter in a rain-shortened game in 1988, against the Phillies, but is not recognized as a full no-hitter by Major League Baseball due to the length of the contest. [WHJ]

✪John Michael (Johnny) Pesky [1940–1990], a lifetime .307 hitter known as "Mr. Red Sox" in a career that saw him spend more than 60 years with that organization, passed away in Danvers, Massachusetts on August 13 at the age of 93. Born John Paveskovich in Portland, Ore., he started his professional career in 1940 and led his league in hits in each of his two minor league seasons, earning most valuable player honors in the American Association for Louisville in 1941. In 1942 Pesky became the Red Sox' regular shortstop and had a brilliant season, leading the AL in hits with 205 while hitting .331 to finishing second to teammate Ted Williams in batting average. There was no Rookie of the Year award at the time, but Pesky finished third in the Most Valuable Player award voting. After spending three seasons in the U.S. Navy during World War II, Pesky returned to the Red Sox in 1946 and again led the league in hits while batting a career-best .335 to help Boston win the AL pennant. The Sox lost the World Series to the Cardinals in seven games, and Pesky was considered by some to be the goat. The winning run in Game 7 scored when the Cards' Enos Slaughter came home from first base on a single by Harry Walker. Not expecting Walker to try to score, Pesky hesitated slightly as the relay man taking the throw from the outfield, leading to the famous cry "Pesky held the ball." He led the AL in hits again in 1947, meaning he was his league's hits leader in each of his first five professional seasons. Pesky was shifted to third base in 1948 after the Red Sox acquired shortstop Vern Stephens from the Browns. In his seven full seasons with Boston Pesky batted over .300 six times and scored more than 100 runs six times. After a slow start in 1952 he was traded to Detroit as part of a nine-player deal, finished his major league career with the Senators in 1954, and spent 1955 as a player-coach with the Yankees' Denver farm club. From 1956-60 he was a minor league manager in the Tigers' organization, then starting in 1961 he spent most of the rest of his life with the Red Sox, in several capacities: as a minor league manager, major league manager (1963-64 and the last five games of the 1980 season), broadcaster, major league coach, special instructor and goodwill ambassador. In 2006 the Red Sox officially named the right field foul pole at Fenway Park "Pesky's Pole," a name that had been given by his Red Sox teammate Mel Parnell. The pole is the point closest to home plate where a ball can clear the fence at Fenway, and Parnell named it after Pesky as a teasing reference to Pesky's lack of power (he hit just six home runs in 539 career games at Fenway). [JGP]

✪David Earl (Dave) Philley [1940-1974], a switch-hitting outfielder whose nine consecutive pinch hits stand as the major league record, died at age 91 on March 15 in Paris, Texas. A veteran of eighteen major league campaigns for eight different organizations, his longest stint was for his original ballclub, the Chicago White Sox for whom he played following a three year stretch in the military. Early in the 1951 season, he was traded to the Athletics along with Gus Zernial as part of the three-team, seven-player deal that brought Minnie Minoso to the Pale Hose. Philley hit 20 or more doubles in seven consecutive seasons while compiling 1,700 lifetime hits, but was best known for his pinch-hitting exploits. With Baltimore in 1961, he set the American League record with 24 pinch-hits, and overall had 93 safeties in 311 pinch at-bats. Philley managed three seasons in Class A ball for the expansion Colt 45s chain and another for the Red Sox before spending eight years scouting for Boston for whom he signed Cecil Cooper. [RN]

Lavern Jack Pierce [1970-2012], whose 395 career minor league home runs rank #10 on the all-time leaderboard, died on September 13 in Monterrey, Mexico. Drafted by Atlanta in 1970 as a catcher out of San Jose City College, Jack debuted at first base with the Braves in 1973 but struggled for playing time. Optioned the following season to Jalisco, he found success south of the border, a sign of great things to come. A trade landed him with the 1975 Tigers, but only briefly. He then played one year in Japan before returning to Mexico, where he obliterated Hector Espino's single season home run mark, hitting 54 for the Leon Bravos in 1986. He remained in Mexico once his playing career ended, working as a manager and coach while also scouting for the Braves, Padres, White Sox and Diamondbacks. Employed by the Red Sox when he was stricken with a pulmonary embolism following complications from hip replacement surgery, he passed unexpectedly at age 63. His legacy includes the signing of Vinnie Castilla, Mexico's all-time career major league home run leader. Pierce was elected to the Salon de la Fama, the Mexican Baseball Hall of Fame, in 2001. [RN]

Ronald Charles (Ron) Plaza [1951-2012], in his 30th season in the Oakland organization as roving fielding instructor and his 61st in professional baseball, died in St. Petersburg on April 15 at the age of 77. Plaza was an infielder for 12 seasons in the Cardinals' system and served six more as minor league skipper for the Redbirds, before getting his first major league assignment with the ill-fated 1969 Seattle Pilots. He enjoyed fourteen seasons in the Reds organization including six on Sparky Anderson's big league staff before joining the Athletics in 1983. [RN]

Andrew David (Andy) Replogle [1975–1981] died in Ft. Myers, Florida at age 58 on April 10. After helping lead his high school team at South Bend, Indiana to the 1970 state baseball championship, Replogle starred at Kansas State University. He pitched for the Milwaukee Brewers in 1978 and again briefly in 1979. Replogle started 18 games in '78 and was 9-5 with a 3.92 ERA. [FT]

Roberto (Munoz) Rodriguez [1963-1979], passed away in Maracay, Venezuela on September 23 at the age of 71 He broke in as a catcher in Daytona Beach and was converted to pitching the following year. He was the thirteenth Venezuelan to appear in the majors when he debuted in1967 for the Kansas City Athletics and appeared in fifteen games. He returned to the majors in 1970 to post a 3-2 mark in 42 appearances for Oakland, San Diego and Chicago (NL). Rodriguez compiled a 95-66 W/L record over eleven seasons in organized ball before returning to his homeland in 1975.He was inducted into the Venezuelan Hall of Fame in 2011 in a class with Wilson Álvarez, Ozzie Guillén and Luis Salazar. After his retirement as a player, he served as an instructor at Carlos Guillen's baseball academy.

✪Robert A. (Bob) Roesner [1978-1979] passed away in Naples, Florida on February 6 at the age of 85. A former Baltimore County educator and high school baseball coach, he served as crew chief for 17 American League games during two different umpire strikes. Mr. Roesner and his umpiring crew were cast for the movie "Major League II," which was filmed at Camden Yards in 1994.

✪Kenneth Darrell (Ken) Rowe [1953–2010] died on November 22 in Dallas, GA. He was 78. Rowe was taken by the Dodgers in the 1955 minor league draft, but did not reach the majors until the team had already moved to Los Angeles. Only appearing in 14 games for the Dodgers in his rookie 1963 season, he still won a World Series ring with the team despite not pitching in the Series. Back and forth between the minors and the big leagues for the rest of his playing days, he set a team record with 88 relief appearances for the 1964 Spokane Indians. He was later a minor league manager from 1968–1971 and was a minor-league pitching coach and instructor for 35 years. He was the Orioles pitching coach in 1985 and 1986. [TSB]

✪Thomas Judson (Tom) Saffell [1941-2009] passed away on September 10 in Sarasota, Florida. He was 91. An outfielder for Pittsburgh and Kansas City in his playing days, his lasting contributions to baseball came as a long-time minor league manager, scout, and executive. He was an elite fastpitch softball player in high school who started his professional baseball career while still in college, in the Appalachian League, after injuring his knee playing football. Released by the Newport Canners, Saffell worked on the railroads for a time before enlisting in the Army Air Corps in 1943. During World War II he flew his P-47 Thunderbolt in 61 combat missions in Europe before his discharge in 1946. After the war he signed a minor league contract and in 1949 made his big-league debut with Pittsburgh. In 1955 the Pirates sold him to the Kansas City Athletics, in part because they had a new outfield prospect named Roberto Clemente. His time in the American League was brief as well, however, and his playing career ended after the 1959 season with the exception of a stint as a pitcher on the Home Run Derby television show. While he batted only .238 over parts of four seasons in the major leagues, he soon achieved distinction as a minor league manager, guiding the Dodgers' Class C team in Reno to the 1960 league title. Saffell managed several teams through the 1972 season, but left baseball for several years in the 1970s. In 1980 he took over as president of the Gulf Coast League, a title he held until 2009, and in 1999 was named "The King of Baseball" by Minor League Baseball. [WHJ]

William Joseph (Bill) Skowron [1951-1967], a hard-hitting first baseman who played on five World Series winners, passed away in Arlington Heights, Illinois on April 27 at the age of 81. Skowron played a total of 39 games in eight World Series and was on the winning side four times with the Yankees (1956, 1958, 1961, 1962) and once with the Dodgers (1963). He hit an impressive .293 in Series play, with eight homers and 29 RBI in 133 at-bats, and his 12 hits in the 1960 Series was a record at the time (it has been topped only three times since). The Chicago native picked up the nickname "Moose" in childhood, not because of his physique but because he was thought to resemble the Italian dictator Benito Mussolini. Skowron enrolled at Purdue University in 1948, where he played basketball, lettered in football and won the Big Ten batting title as a sophomore as the Boilermakers' shortstop with a .500 batting average in conference play. The summer after his sophomore year (1950) he played semi-pro baseball for a team in Austin, Minn., and the Yankees signed him to a bonus contract before he returned to school. Skowron won the Piedmont League batting title as a first-year pro in 1951, and in 1952 he was named The Sporting News' Minor League Player of the Year with Kansas City of the American Association, where he hit .341 and led the league in home runs (31) and RBI (134). Despite that performance, he had to return to Kansas City in 1953 before making the jump to the Yankees in '54. Skowron made the All-Star team five straight years (1957-61) while hitting for average with power. His batting average was .298 or better in six of his first seven seasons with the Yanks, and he topped 20 home runs four times while in pinstripes. After the 1962 season he was traded to the Dodgers for pitcher Stan Williams, and while he had a poor season in Los Angeles, batting just .203, he started all four games of the World Series as the Dodgers swept his ex-teammates. The Dodgers sold him to Washington after the season, and he went on to play for the White Sox (where he was an All-Star in 1965) and Angels before retiring after the 1967 season. He finished his career with a .282 batting average and 211 home runs. After his playing career Skowron settled in Chicago, where he worked for a trucking company and was in the restaurant business before joining the White Sox as a community ambassador. Popular among his teammates, he was one of the pallbearers at Mickey Mantle's funeral in 1995. [JGP]

✪Martin John (Marty) Springstead [1960-2009], an American League umpire from 1966 to 1985, died on January 17 in Sarasota, Florida. He was 74. In 1973, Springstead became the youngest crew chief in World Series history at the age of 36. He also earned assignments in the 1978 and 1983 Fall Classics, as well as three All-Star games (1969, 1975, 1982) and five championship series. After retiring from the field, he became the junior circuit's executive director of umpires, then worked as a supervisor for MLB after umpire staffs from the leagues merged. He retired from his management position before the 2010 season. [RN]

James Franklin (Jimmy) Stewart [1961–2006] passed away on November 24 at Tampa at age 73. Most of Stewart's major league career was as a utility player in both the infield and outfield, where one of his nicknames was "Super Sub." In 1970 he played every position except shortstop and pitcher. He managed in the minors for one season and was a scout. Stewart is probably best known for writing the scouting report on the Oakland A's before the 1990 World Series against Cincinnati. Reds manager Lou Piniella credited the report with playing an integral role in the Reds' four game sweep. A track, basketball and baseball star at Austin Peay University, Stewart first reached the majors with the Chicago Cubs in 1963. When regular second baseman Ken Hubbs was killed in a February 1964 plane crash, he was designated as Hubbs' replacement. But Stewart played only 64 games as a second baseman that season. His major league career spanned the years 1963 through 1973 with the Cubs, White Sox, Reds and Astros, his career batting average .237. [FT]

✪Edward Marvin (Ed) Stroud [1963–1971] died in Cleveland Ohio on July 2 at age 72. Nicknamed "The Creeper" he was a three-time stolen base leader in the minor leagues. He played over 100 games per season from 1967 through 1970, hitting .266 with 29 stolen bases for the 1970 Senators under Ted Williams. [FT]

✪John Junior (Champ) Summers [1971-2001], a Vietnam veteran who played ten seasons in the majors for six different teams, passed away in Ocala, Florida on October 11 at the age of 66. After his discharge from the U.S. Army, Summers enrolled at Southern Illinois University and, as multi-sport athlete, drew attention from both the American Basketball Association and National Football League. Despite his success as a college baseball player, Champ wasn't drafted upon graduation but when he was later spotted on the softball diamond by Oakland A's scout George Bradley, an appeal was made to owner Charlie O. Finley who agreed to sign the 25 year-old left-handed power hitter to a professional contract. Within three years he debuted in Oakland but was soon dealt to the Cubs, then the Reds before finding a home for three seasons in Detroit where he became a favorite of manager Sparky Anderson and legions of Tiger fans. Eventually, he was traded to the Giants for Enos Cabell, and then on to San Diego for his final campaign with the 1984 NL champions. Ironically, his final career at-bat came against his former teammates at Tiger Stadium. In 1989, Summers returned to the game as a roving hitting instructor in the Yankees organization under manager Bucky Dent, and by mid-season both were called up to The Show when Dallas Green was unceremoniously dismissed. His last hurrah as a player came that off-season with the Fort Myers Sun Sox of the Senior Professional Baseball Association. His final appearance in uniform was in 2001 as skipper of the Gateway Grizzlies of the independent Frontier League. [RN]

✪Robert Dale (Hawk) Taylor [1957–1971], who hit the first pinch-hit grand slam for the Mets, died on June 9 in Paducah, KY, at the age of 73. Taylor signed a $125,000 bonus contract as a highly-touted slugger out of Metropolis (IL) Community High School, but never lived up to his prep reputation. He went directly from high school to join the 1957 Braves, earning a World Series ring without appearing in a game. He played sparsely for the Braves, missing part of the 1961 season due to military service, until his contract was purchased by the Mets. He hit the first pinch-hit grand slam in Mets history against the Pirates on August 17, 1966, in the bottom of the fourth; the Mets would go on to win 8–7. When the American League began looking at instituting the Designated Hitter, Royals manager Joe Gordon claimed Taylor would be a perfect fit, but he retired before the rule was implemented. His uncle, Ben E. Taylor, played in the majors in the early 1950s. [TSB]

✪Thaddius Asa (Thad) Tillotson, Jr. [1960–1970] passed away on May 16 at age 71 in Merced, California. He was a pitcher for the New York Yankees in 1967-68, where he tied the team record of losing eight consecutive games set in 1908 by Bill Hogg. Tillotson's career record was 4-9 with a 4.06 ERA. He was an avid bowler and enjoyed singing country music with his mother and he made several recordings. [FT]

Harold Arthur (Hal) Trosky, Jr. [1954–1960], born Troyavesky, the son of former Indians and White Sox slugger, and 1936 American League RBI champion, "Hoot" grew up playing baseball in the tiny, eastern Iowa town of Norway. A prolific high school star, his .667 batting during in his senior year drew the attention of twelve major league organizations, and in 1954 he signed with Chicago White Sox scout Johnny Mostil. Trosky homered in his first at-bat in pro ball, but after two injury-prone seasons in the minors was converted into a pitcher. In his first season on the mound he racked up nine wins, and he followed that mark with 14 victories in 1957. In late 1958, three months after throwing a no-hitter with Colorado Springs, he was summoned to the majors, and made his White Sox debut on September 25, 1958. Trosky earned his lone major league win three days later, with two effective innings against the Kansas City Athletics, but that proved to be the apex of his career. Despite a solid spring training effort in 1959, he was sent to AA Memphis to begin the 1959 campaign, and he never returned to the majors. Trosky earned his insurance license in Iowa in 1955, and the career change became permanent after he left baseball for good in 1961. [WHJ]

Thomas Mullen (Tom) Umphlett [1950–1970] passed away in Norfolk, Virginia on September 21 at the age of 82. The outfielder played for the Boston Red Sox and the Washington Senators in 1953-1955, and later managed four different minor league teams in the late 1960s. The Ahoskie High School (NC) graduate, a three-sport star, declined football scholarships from Duke, the University of North Carolina, North Carolina State, and Wake Forest in order to sign with the Red Sox in 1950. In 1953 he was named Boston's starting center fielder, debuting April 16, and combined his defense with a .283 batting average to finish second to Harvey Kuenn in the American League Rookie of the Year voting. His sophomore jinx became a sophomore disaster, as he hit only .217 over the next two seasons, and he was returned to the minors for good in 1956. He retired as a player in 1967, but over the next four years managed Class A teams in New York, Wisconsin, North Carolina and Virginia before leaving the game entirely in 1970. He returned to his home in northeast North Carolina and remained there for the remainder of his life. [WHJ]

✪Allen Francis (Al) Veigel [1937–1946] died on April 8 in Dover, Ohio. He was 95. Veigel pitched two games for the Boston Bees at the end of the 1939 season. His return to the majors was derailed in 1941 when he entered the Army Air Force, serving through 1945. Upon his return from military duty he pitched seven games for the 1946 Jackson Senators before retiring. After his retirement he became a sporting goods salesman and respected basketball referee, earning induction into the Ohio Officials Hall of Fame in 1992. He was also inducted into the Tuscarawas County Cy Young Hall of Fame in 1971. [TSB]

✪Bruce Frederick Von Hoff [1964–1970] died on September 11 in Gulfport, Florida at age 68. He played for parts of the 1965 through 1967 seasons with Houston, making ten starts in 1967 with no wins and three losses. His brother Byron was a minor league player. [FT]

John Francis (Jay) Ward [1956–2002] died in Kalispell, Montana, on February 24 at the age of 73. Ward only played 27 major-league games for the Minnesota Twins and Cincinnati Reds, but spent 15 seasons in the minors and one season in Japan. He started his playing career with a flourish, hitting two grand slams in a game for the 1956 Kearney Yankees. His first major-league hit came in dramatic fashion for the Twins—a two-run game-winning double against the Kansas City Athletics on May 10, 1963 (the Twins won 2–0). Alas it was his only hit of the season in 15 at-bats. After his playing career ended, he was a minor league manager for 13 years and a major-league hitting coach for three years. [TSB]

✪Harry Hunter Wendelstedt, Jr. [1962-1998], who wore uniform number 21 as a National League umpire from from 1966 to 1998, passed away on March 9 in Daytona Beach. He was 73. Known throughout baseball as "Chief", Wendelstedt worked five World Series, seven League Championship Series and four All-Star Games. He also called balls and strikes in 5 no-hitters, tying an NL record held by Bill Klem. On May 31, 1968, it was Wendelstedt's call that preserved Don Drysdale's scoreless innings streak when he ruled that Giants catcher Dick Dietz made no attempt to avoid being struck by a pitch that would have forced in a run to break up Drysdale's fifth consecutive shutout. Harry's passion for umpiring inspired him to open the Wendelstedt School for Umpires located in Ormond Beach, a certified program which has produced more professional umpires than any other in the history of the game. Wendelstedt's son, Harry Hunter Wendelstedt III, follows in his father's footsteps as a current major league umpire, wear the #21 to honor his father's memory. [RN]

Frank Lee Wills [1980–1991] passed away in New Orleans on May 11 at age 53. A first round (16th overall) June 1980 draft pick out of Tulane University, Wills pitched nine seasons in the majors from 1983 through 1991 for Kansas City, Seattle, Cleveland and Toronto. He won 22 games, including the Eastern Division title-clinching game for the Blue Jays in 1989. His best year as a starter came in 1985 at Seattle when he started 35 games and had a record of 5-11. Wills had a career high 44 appearances for Toronto in 1990. [FT]

✪Edward Frederick (Eddie) Yost [1944-1984], a third baseman who never spent a day in the minors and known as "The Walking Man" for his exceptional ability to draw bases on balls, died on October 16 in Weston, Massachusetts. He was 86. Yost led the American League in walks six times, drew more than 100 walks eight times, and walked 1,614 times in his career, ranking 11th all-time. He had an on-base percentage above .400 in eight different full seasons and had a career mark of .394. After graduating from John Adams High School in Queens, Yost turned down an offer of a Class D contract from the Yankees to attend New York University. But after his freshman year the 17-year-old Yost signed with the Senators in August 1944 when they promised they would keep him on the major league roster. The following winter he was inducted into the Navy. When he was discharged in July 1946, he returned to the Senators under the G.I. Bill of Rights that guaranteed returning servicemen their pre-service jobs for one year. Yost petitioned baseball commissioner Happy Chandler in the spring of 1947 for an exemption that would allow him to go to the minors for seasoning but was turned down. By the time the Senators could send Yost to the minors, he had won the regular third base job on the strength of his slick fielding, and he remained the Nats' regular at the hot corner through 1958. He was named to the All-Star team in 1952 and received Most Valuable Player votes in three different seasons. His considerable power was disguised by the spacious dimensions of Washington's Griffith Stadium. During a seven-year period of his prime, from 1949-55, Yost averaged more than nine homers a season on the road but just one a year at home. After he was traded to Detroit in 1959, he smacked a career-high 21 homers that season. Yost went to the Los Angeles Angels in the American League expansion draft after the 1960 season and was the first batter in the Halos' first regular season game in 1961. When he was released as a player in July 1962 he was immediately appointed to the Angels' coaching staff. He continued as a coach for the Senators, Mets and Red Sox through the 1984 season and was the third-base coach for the 1969 "Miracle Mets" World Series champions. At the time he retired as a player, Yost held the career records for leadoff home runs (28) and games played at third base; he still ranks 12th all-time in the latter category. Well-respected by his peers, Yost spent some time as the American League's player representative in labor negotiations. He continued attending NYU during the offseasons, earning a B.S. in physical education in 1951 followed by a master's degree, and he spent some time teaching in New York City public schools early in his playing career. ABOUT THE EDITORS

GARY GILLETTE

Gary Gillette is editor-in-chief and the creative force behind two groundbreaking sports encyclopedias: The ESPN Baseball Encyclopedia, first published in 2004, and the ESPN Pro Football Encyclopedia, first published in 2006. A nationally known baseball author, editor, analyst, and consultant Gillette is president of 24-7 Baseball, L.L.C., co-chair of the Society for American Baseball Research's Ballparks Committee, and a member of the SABR board of directors and the Baseball Prospectus Advisory Board. He is also a member of Sports Panel (electors) of the National Polish-American Sports Hall of Fame and a member of the Baseball Prospectus Advisory Board. He served from 2009–12 on the SABR Board of Directors.

Gillette is president of the Friends of Historic Hamtramck Stadium, former home of the Detroit Stars and one of the few Negro League home ballparks still standing. Hamtramck Stadium was placed on the National Register of Historic Places last summer. He is now working to save the field and place a memorial on the site. In April 2008, Gillette organized and underwrote a symposium held in Detroit called Late In the Game: The Tigers and Red Sox Long Road to Integration.

Gillette's most recent book is Big League Ballparks, co-authored with Stuart Shea, Matt Silverman, and Eric Enders. The most lavishly illustrated and comprehensive history of major league ballparks ever compiled, it was published in late 2009 by Metro Books of New York, an imprint of Sterling Publishing.

Gillette was a baseball columnist for ESPN.com's MLB Insider in 2005-06. Other work by Gillette includes co-authoring an extensive article entitled "The Changing Game" in the seventh and eighth editions of Total Baseball. He was also the author of a groundbreaking article on the history of the home run in the sixth edition of Total Baseball in 1999 and was a contributor to six editions of Total Baseball. He has contributed to many other books, periodicals, and Web sites, including several editions of the Baseball Prospectus and to Baseball: The Biographical Encyclopedia.

Gillette lives in Detroit's historic Indian Village with his wife Vicki and children Karolina and Kamil.

PETE PALMER

Pete Palmer is the co-editor of The ESPN Baseball Encyclopedia and The ESPN Pro Football Encyclopedia. He maintains the most comprehensive and most accurate baseball database in existence. Palmer's database has become the de facto standard for baseball history and is licensed by many clients, including Baseball-Reference.com, Retrosheet.org, Baseball Prospectus, ESPN, and SABR.

Palmer is a veritable oracle of American professional sports history. A retired defense-industry computer programmer, he has been a pioneer and a leader in both baseball and pro football research research for more than four decades. The depth and breadth of Palmer's work is truly remarkable. One of the foremost chroniclers of the National Pastime, Palmer co-authored with John Thorn the seminal analytical work, T*he Hidden Game of Baseball*, in the mid-1980s. Thorn and Palmer were also co-editors of the first seven editions of the groundbreaking encyclopedia Total Baseball from 1989-2001.

The most famous baseball writer of our time, Peter Gammons, has written in the Boston Globe that "[Bill] James was not the creator of Sabermetrics and such studies of the industry — Peter Palmer is the real guru…" Among Palmer's analytical innovations are On-base Plus Slugging (OPS), now universally used as a quick but reliable measure of batting strength.

Palmer's brushes with baseball greatness include bidding The Kid adieu at Ted Williams' final game on September 28, 1960, at Fenway Park. He is married to the former Beth Statz, grand-niece of the legendary Jigger Statz, perhaps the greatest player in PCL history. Pete, Beth, and their children Emily, Daniel, and Stephen split their time between Hollis, New Hampshire, and Boca Raton, Florida.

ROD NELSON

Rod Nelson is the former Research Services Manager for the Society for American Baseball Research. He is co-chair of the SABR Scouts Committee and project leader for the Who-Signed-Whom Database, as well as a member of the core team behind the massive effort that is compiling and editing SABR's minor league database. Nelson also launched the interactive BaseballNecrology online forum which has stimulated activity in this important area of baseball research.

TED TUROCY

Ted Turocy is the Data Assets Coordinator for the Society for American Baseball Research. In this role he is responsible for managing SABR's initiatives to compile and disseminate datasets to support 21st-century baseball researchers, including projects to maintain a master register of persons who have been involved with professional baseball at any level, and an extensive dataset of historical minor league performance statistics.

Turocy holds the post of Senior Lecturer in the School of Economics at University of East Anglia in Norwich, England. As a specialist in applying computational methods to economics and game theory, he has made several contributions to baseball research. He is the maintainer of Chadwick, an open source library of computer code to process Retrosheet and other baseball data at the game-by-game, play-by-play, and pitch-by- pitch levels. He has also published several scholarly articles on baseball topics in academic journals, including a quantitative analysis that concluded, contrary to over a century of received wisdom, that there is no strategic advantage conferred by batting last in a game.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The editors would like express our thanks to the SABR Staff — Marc Appleman, Jeff Schatski, Deb Jayne, and Jacob Pomrenke, and Cecilia Tan.

We also recognize our debt of gratitude to Ed Washuta, Jack Morris, Frank Hamilton and the team of selfless contributors to the SABR Minor League Statistics Project.

the fastest, easiest-to-use, most accurate statistics on the internet

Sports Reference sites contain every athlete, every team, and every league in major league football, basketball, baseball and hockey history, and we've just launched the first site with every athlete and medal awarded in Olympic history as well.

The Play Index

Have You Ever Wanted to know?

- The most pitches thrown in a game in 1999...by a Ranger...in relief?
- The most earned runs allowed by Pedro Martinez...against the Yankees...at home...when he allowed no walks?
- The most RBI by a shortstop...against the Mets...in interleague play?
- The most stolen bases in the 80's...by a cleanup hitter...in a loss?
- The batter with the most home runs off Jim Kaat...in 1970...including details for each one (with even the runners on base)?
- The last time a player appeared in LF, CF and RF all in one game?
- The pitch-by-pitch sequence for a particular plate appearance?
- The details of every plate appearance between Mike Piazza and Roger Clemens?
- How many .400 seasons Ty Cobb would have if you transported him into Coors Field circa 2001?
- Trot Nixon's platoon splits from year to year all on one page?

The Baseball-Reference.com Play Index allows you to do all this and more. Utilizing over fifty years of RetroSheet play-by-play data, the tools in the Play Index search for answers to baseball's statistical history on your terms. Subscriptions start at $29/year, and you are free to try out all of the tools as much as you like.

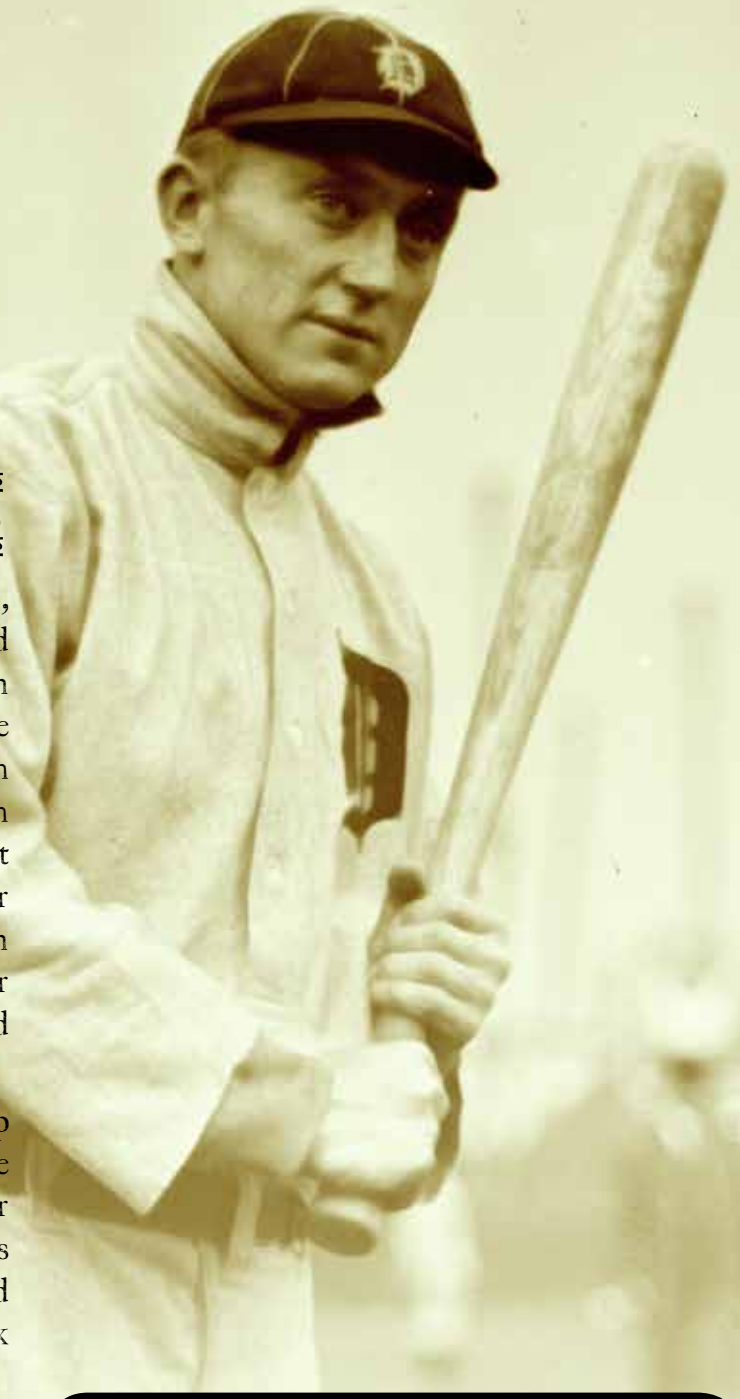
SABR

Celebrating 42 years
1971 2013

OF PASSION FOR THE NATIONAL PASTIME



In August 1971, Bob Davids of Washington, D.C., invited a small group of baseball historians and statisticians to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York, to "meet and exchange first-hand views with other statisticians" and establish a formal organization and "a publication in which research efforts could be presented." The end result of the meeting was the creation of the Society for American Baseball Research, a member-driven nonprofit organization whose mission is to foster the research and dissemination of the history and record of baseball.

The 16 original members have grown to a membership of nearly 7,000 worldwide. SABR is home to everyone from academics to professional sportswriters to amateur historians and statisticians to students and casual fans who merely enjoy reading about baseball history and occasionally gathering with other members to talk baseball.

SABR's members are as diverse as the crowd at a ballgame. Young. Old. Men. Women. Retirees. Students. Teachers. Writers. Computer programmers. Policemen. Construction workers. Accountants. Doctors. Lawyers. Former players. The list goes on. Some are active baseball researchers and historians. Some enjoy reading baseball biographies and history. Some merely love talking baseball with like-minded friends. What unites all of us is an interest in the game and joy in learning more about it.

The purpose of SABR is to foster the research, preservation, and dissemination of the history and record of baseball. SABR carries out that mission through programs:

- To encourage the study of baseball, past and present
- To encourage further baseball research and literary efforts
- To encourage the preservation of baseball research materials
- To help disseminate educational, historical, and research information about baseball

"Three cheers for The Emerald Guide!

It fills a void that resulted from the demise of The Sporting News Baseball Guide in 2006 and is a worthy successor to that esteemed publication. For those of us who can't get through a season without having the facts and figures at our fingertips, the Emerald Guide is an absolute treasure."

DICK BEVERAGE
BASEBALL HISTORIAN AND SECRETARY-TREASURER OF THE ASSOCIATION OF PROFESSIONAL BALL PLAYERS OF AMERICA

"The tradition of a baseball guide goes back to the 1860s and to Henry Chadwick, 'Father Baseball.' Through thick and (sometimes) thin, guides were published by the Spalding and Reach companies, by the Commissioner's Office and by The Sporting News. Serious students of baseball can rejoice that the Emerald Guide project has stepped into the breach, reviving a custom without which we would all be the poorer."
